DR. MUHLENBERG'S CENTENNIAL HYMN.

Give praise, all ye people, give praise to the Lord,
Alleluias of freedom let freemen accord;
Let the East and the West, North and South roll along
Sea, mountain and prairie, one jubilant song.
CHORUS—Give praise, all ye people, give praise to the Lord.
Alleluias of freedom let freemen accord.

For the sunshine and rainfall, again and again,
Our myriads of acres enriching with grain;
For the earth still unfolding her manifold wealth,
For the skies beaming vigor, the winds breathing health,
Give praise, etc.

For the nation's wide table, so bounteously spread,
That the many have feasted and all have been fed;
With no bondage their God-given rights to enthrall,
But liberty, guarded by justice for all,
Give praise, etc.

Your sons of the anvil, the loom and the plough,
His the mines and the fields, to Him gratefully bow;
His the flocks and the herds, sing on hillsides and vales,
On His ocean domain chant His name with the gales,
Give praise, etc,

Ye merchantmen princes, your riches behold,
The largess of Him whose the silver and gold;
And ye too, renowned in Art, Science and Lore,
His glory in all be it yours to adore,
Give praise, etc.

Brave men of our forces, lifeguard of our coasts,
To our Leader aye loyal, Jehovah of Hosts,
Glow the stars of your banners, reflecting His light,
Your conflicts alone for the Good, True and Right,
Give praise, etc.

Now praise we again for the Union, it stands
Unchanged as it came from our forefathers hand
A century gone—Oh, with praise blend the prayer,
Gracious Lord, centuries more, be the Union Thy care,
Give praise, etc.

Miscellaneous.

THE DOUBLE WEDDING.

Marjorie Wallace represented to me all that was noble, generous, self-sacrificing in womanhood. My gratitude to her begun when I was ten years old, and she came to the cottage where my mother had scraped out scanty food for herself and for me longe than my memory recalls. She lifted me from that mother's dead, cold form, when I was sobbing out my childish agony, and covering my thin, chilled limbs in her own velvet cloak, carried me in garments as soft and fine as her own; she shared every luxury of her splendid home with me; she gave me teachers for all studies suited to my age. As I grew to womanhood she introduced me to society as her adopted sister. Best of all, she loved me.

She was twenty-five when she took me home, and for eight years I can recall only happiness. I had no whim ungratified, no reasonable wish crossed or denied. If I had been indeed the sister she called me she could not have lavished upon me more tender care and affection.

When I was eighteen I had a lover who won my whole heart. I gave him love, unconsciously, and when his words showed me what my own sensations meant I shrunk back affrighted. With the intuition of deep, grateful affection. I knew that Marjorie had wrapped up her life in mine. She stood utterly alone in the world. Her paid companion and housekeeper was a matron of middle age, whose whole soul was absorbed in preserves, pickles and crochet work. In her loneliness she had taken me into her great, noble heart, and when I left her I knew I should leave her desolate.

So I shrunk back from the avowal that was such an ecstacy of delight, such a bitter self-reproach. I thought I had conquered all traces of emotion in my face as I went from the garden where we had walked—my lover and myself—to Marjorie's sitting-room. But she looked into my face, with her soft beautiful eyes shadowed by a troubled inquiry.

"Have you quarreled with Stephen?" she asked.

"No—I have not quarreled—we—that is—I do not think he will come again."

For the first time she frowned sternly.

"Is it possible that you are that base trifler, a coquette," she said, in a voice full of indignation, "that you have led Stephen to believe that you loved him only from vanity, and have rejected his honest, true love?"

In my deep pain that she could so misjudge me I sobbed out the truth that I loved Stephen, but that it seemed to me a base ingratitude to desert her.

"Child! child!" she said, softly, gathering me in her arms. "Heaven forbid your life should be sacrificed to me! Did you ever hear among our friends of my love story?"

"Never!" I said earnestly. "But I knew there was a great grief in your life at sometime. I could see it in your eyes, even in your smile. It is tender and sweet, but never joyous."

"When I was your age," she said, greatly stroking my hand as she spoke, "I was as light hearted as a bird. My orphanhood was an event so long past that I have no recollection of my parents; but my uncle was father and dear companion to me. He was a wealthy man, and gave me every advantage that wealth can bestow. And when Arnold Halcombe"—

I started at that name, but Marjorie did not notice, continuing her story: "wooed me for his wife, Uncle Charles made no objection, though my lover was a poor man, compared to my uncle. We were very happy in those days, very happy! Arnold was a true, noble man, one to whom love was a sacred word, a woman's heart a sacred trust. We had been betrothed nearly six months when Uncle Charles decided to accept an invitation to spend a week with some city friends to give me an opportunity to do shopping, for in the spring I was to be Arnold Halcombe's wife. We started off gayly, and spent a most delightful week in London. Uncle Charles was a resident there during several years before he retired from business, and could take me to visit all points of interest. We made large purchases for my bridal outfit, and returned home.

"Alas! we returned, mourning heavily, where we had left so gayly. Upon our trip from the city Uncle Charles, in some way, made a false step upon the platform from a railway carriage, and fell, injuring himself so severely that immediate amputation of both legs became necessary. It was in my power then to repay the devotion and care that had been lavished upon me, and I faithfully endeavored to alleviate my dear uncle's sufferings in every way in my power.

"It was then, dear, that my heart was torn as yours is to-day. The basest ingratitude seemed to me involved in my marriage, necessitated a divided duty, even if my husband would consent to live here. That, too, I hesitated to ask for, as you know the life here will better suit a retired, elderly man or woman, than a young, ambitious aspirant for the world's honors and profits. So I made my choice."

"But your choice was to remain with your uncle."

"Yes, dear, I remained here. Arnold Halcombe, the noblest man I ever knew, did not make my duty harder by anger at his dismissal. Very sadly he admitted the necessity of the case, and left me. Even then he would have corresponded with me, have held himself bound, but that I would not permit. My uncle's life was not in danger and I would not let Arnold waste the best years of his manhood without wife or home. So we bade each other farewell, and a few months later I heard that my lover had joined a party of men going to Australia."

"And have you never heard of him since?"

"Never! My uncle lived six years. When I was most desolate, after his death, I found you."

"Marjorie," I whispered, "did Arnold Halcombe ever marry?"

"I never knew, dear."

"But you—do you still love him?"

"Yes, dear, I shall love him while I live!"

She told me no more of her heart history then, but talked of Stephen, of our love, of her entire sympathy in our future. I think she must have written to him, for in the evening he come again, and we were betrothed.

I knew that Stephen must return to his business in a few days, but he promised to return in a month's time.

"Stephen," I said, "tell me again about your cousin's offer."

"Why, do you want to go to Australia?" he cried in amazement.

"No, but I want to know something about your cousin."

"There is but little to tell. When I was a mere boy he went to Australia, a poor man. He invested a very small capital in sheep, hiring his farm. By degrees he increased his stock, bought the farm, and became an enormously wealthy man. About six months ago he came to London, intending to remain here. But he wishes still to retain some of his Australian possessions, and is looking for an agent, to whom he offers far greater advantages than those he enjoyed himself. When he first proposed to me to go, I thought as I think now, that I preferred to pursue the business I have here, and grow rich slowly, than to exile myself perhaps for years. But had you persisted in what you said this morning, I think to-morrow I should have accepted my cousin's offer."

"Is your cousin married?"

"No, indeed! And yet he is as free from bachelor eccentricities as I am. He had some disappointment in his youth, and it never soured or imbittered him. He is a splendid fellow, one of the handsomest men I ever saw, and as noble as he is fine-looking. But why are you interested about him?"

"I will tell you when you come again. In the meantime, will you use your influence to persuade him to come with you?"

"Here?"

"Yes, here. Bring him with you. Make any excuse you like, only bring him!"

"But I do not understand," began Stephen.

"Never mind, I have promised to tell you then."

"I will bring him, if he will come."

I was sure he would come! It was hard to carry a secret hidden from Marjorie's loving eyes for an entire month; but fortunately, we were soon engrossed in wedding preparations—for Marjorie, remembering her own broken love-dream, had consented and won my consent to Stephen's wish to be married in January.

So we spent the late October and early November days in stitching busily upon the finery that every bride wishes to take to her new home.

When the day came, all my nervous anxiety about our preparations was attributed to my desire to have Stephen pleased; but, strange as it may seem, I was not thinking of Stephen. He was to come on the train due at half-past eleven, and the carriage was sent to the station to meet him.

I was dressed early, and fussed about Marjorie till even her quiet gentleness was roused to opposition.

"Why, child, it is absurd," she said, as I dragged my favorite of all her dresses from the wardrobe. "I shall look like a goose in that in the morning."

"But we will have no chance to dress again," I urged, "and this is so becoming."

I had pulled her hair down, and was twining the magnificent raven lengths into the most becoming coiffure my skill could compass. In the glossy braids I twisted a half wreath of fine leaves with the scarlet blossoms I had taken from the conservatory. The dress Marjorie would not wear, but she chose a heavy black silk, with trimmings of thread lace, and let me put a scarlet bow upon the fine lace at the throat, and coral earrings in the small white ears.

"I look like a flamingo!" she protested.

"You look like a queen!" I persisted. The folds of rich silk trailing upon the ground suited well her tall, noble figure, and her face was always the most beautiful one I ever saw.

It required some diplomacy to escape observation when I led our visitors into the house, but I invented an errand that sent Marjorie to my room just as the carriage drove up.

Stephen was accompanied by his cousin, and my first look into his handsome face convinced me that memory was busy at finding himself in Marjorie's house. I gave scant greeting to Stephen before I drew Arnold Halcombe into the library. I scarcely know in what words I told him of my debt to Marjorie, of her confidence to me, and my plan, of which I was careful to assure him she was totally ignorant. But his answers sent my flying feet to seek my benefactress.

I found her in my room, vainly searching for the ornament I had fast in my pocket, but my face caused her to pause in the task.

"What good news does Stephen bring, that makes my little girl so radiant?" she asked.

I put my arms about her, and holding her fast, I said, almost sobbing in my eagerness:

"Marjorie, since the day you lifted me from poverty and suffering to utter happiness, I have never ceased to pray that at some time I might be permitted to bring some brightness to you."

"Dear child, every hour you are with me answers your prayers," she said, lovingly.

"But I never hoped," I said, "that I could bring you such glad tidings as I have now."

"To me!" she cried, her sweet face growing pale.

"Of Arnold Halcombe," I said softly; "of his true, unchanging love for you; of his faithful devotion to the one deep affection of his life; of—Marjorie, Marjorie, of his presence here to-day to tell you this himself!"

"Here? Arnold here?"

"In the library, waiting for you," I answered, suddenly releasing her, plunging down stairs, rushing in upon patient Stephen in the drawing room, and executing a pas seul for his benefit that certainly would have admitted me to any lunatic asylum in the country. Then I pulled him down, and, in whispers, told him about it, laughing and crying, till he declared I would wind up with a fit of hysterics.

But I didn't. I was as proper and prettily behaved as possible when Marjorie came in, leaning upon Arnold Halcombe's arm, with every lurking shadow chased from her face by the gentle happiness there, while he, erect and proud, looking as a man does who gains the supreme desire of his heart after years of waiting.

If ever true, fervent thanksgiving ascended from a greatful happy heart, I am sure it rose from Marjorie's on that November day when Arnold came to her.

We had a double wedding in January and Stephen carried me to his London home; but we make frequent holidays to the lovely home where Marjorie gives us cordial welcome, and where, I am sure, she has the desolation I dreaded to leave all swept away in the happiness of her husband's presence and devoted love.

The Wandering Jew.

One of the most remarkable fictions ever accepted by the people, is that of the Wandering Jew. Its basis rests upon a false interpretation of the words of Scripture: "There are some of them standing here who shall not taste death until they see the Son of Man coming in his Kingdom." It was the belief of many that this prophecy was literally fulfilled in the person of a Jew who was wandering over the earth, and was to continue to wander till the end of time. The first mention of the mystical personage is found in the chronicle of Matthew Paris, who states that in 1228 an Archbishop of Greater Armenia having visited the Abbey of St. Albans while on a pilgrimage to the shrines of England, was asked whether he had ever heard or seen of a certain Joseph, who was present when our Lord suffered, who spoke to him and was still alive, wandering upon the face of the earth. A knight in his retinue answering, said that his lord well knew the man, that he had eaten at the Archbishop's table, and was often seen and conversed with by him. The Archbishop went on to relate that as the Jews were dragging our Lord to be crucified, Catarphilus, one of the porters in the service of Pilate, struck him, saying in mockery, "Go quicker; why do you loiter?" And Christ, looking back on him with a stern countenance, said, "I am going, and you will wait until I return." As our Lord had said, Catarphilus is still waiting His return. He was, at the time of our Lord's death, thirty years of age, and when he comes to the age of one hundred he returns to the same age he was when Christ suffered. After the ascension of our Lord, Catarphilus was baptized by Ananius and was named Joseph. He dwelt in Armenia and other Eastern countries passing his time with the prelates of the Church, a man of holy conversation, of few words and circumspect behavior, never speaking except to Bishops and religious, and relating the events which took place when our Lord died, and in the lives of the Apostles.

The next mention of the Wandering Jew we find in 1505 in Bohemia, where a poor weaver named Kokot, in great perplexity to find a treasure hidden by his grandfather some sixty years before, was shown by the Jew where to find it, he having been present when it was hidden. About the same time, mention is made of the mysterious personage in the East, but the most circumstantial account of him is that given by Dr. Paul Von Etzen, afterwards Bishop of Schleswig, who says that in 1547 "he observed a tall man with his hair hanging over his shoulders, standing barefoot during the sermon, over against the pulpit, listening with the deepest attention to the discourse, and whenever the name of Jesus was mentioned, bowing himself profoundly and humbly, sighing and beating his breast. He had no other clothing in the bitter cold of the winter, except a pair of hose which were in tatters about his feet, and a coat with a girdle which reached to his feet, and his general appearance was that of a man of fifty years." The doctor was struck by the man's appearance, and inquired about him. He found that he was unknown to any one. People had seen him in all parts of Europe, but knew him not. On questioning him, the doctor learned that he was a Jew by birth, by name Ahasuerus, by trade a shoemaker; that he had been present at the crucifixion, and had lived ever since, traveling through the world. He related all the details of the crucifixion, and gave accounts of the changes in the Governments of the Eastern and other countries for many centuries. He stated that he had worked to have Christ put to death, and when the sentence was pronounced he ran home to call his family to look at Him as he was carried to execution. Tired with the weight of the cross, Christ tried to rest for a while near the door of Ahasuerus, but was driven by him away and bid to hasten His steps. Christ, looking at him said, "I shall stand and rest, but thou shalt go till the last day." When these words were uttered, Ahasuerus, who had his child in his arms, put it down, and unable to remain where he was, followed Christ and saw him suffer and die. When this had taken place, he could not return to Jerusalem, but was impelled to go forth into strange lands, one after another.

Twenty years afterwards, the Wandering Jew was reported to have been seen in Spain. In 1599 he is said to have been seen in Vienna; in 1601 at Lubeck, and shortly afterwards at Revel in Livonia, and Cracow in Poland. He was seen in Moscow, and in 1603 he was again at Lubeck. The next year he arrived in Paris, though the chroniclers state that they did not see him.

It is very probable that impostors, seeing how easily the story was swallowed, frequently appeared in places and claimed to be the Wandering Jew. About the beginning of the last century, a man calling himself such appeared in England, and though educated people laughed at his pretentions, yet the vulgar trusted and believed in him. The last appearance of a person claiming to be the Wandering Jew was in 1774 at Brussels.

HORRIBLE REVELATIONS FROM OHIO—A MURDERER WHO BORE AN EXCELLENT REPUTATION.

A villain with a heart more callous than that of Thomassen, and a record no less atrocious, has just been uncovered at Ada, Hardin county, Ohio, in the person of Isaac B. Charles, late city treasurer of Ada, and who has, up to short period, borne an excellent reputation, and has been regarded as a consistent member of the Methodist church, but who is now proved, within the past four years, to have murdered his own father and mother, made away with his wife and child

PROPOSED REVISION OF THE DEMOCRATIC RULES.

As a matter of general information, and in accordance with custom, we publish in another column the Rules which are to govern the approaching Democratic Convention, which should be carefully read and preserved by the voters.

We also publish the Call for the County Convention, which will meet Tuesday, August 8th, and the delegate election will be held the Saturday previous. The apportionment of delegates is made on the basis of the Democratic vote for Pershing in 1875. By this table it will be seen that Briarcreek and South each lose a delegate, while North Conyngham, Catawissa, Hemlock and Sugarloaf each gain one. This makes the total number of delegates seventy, the limit allowed by the rules.

At the Convention of 1874, a committee, consisting of J. G. Freeze, M. E. Jackson, C. R. Buckalew, J. B. Knittle, and D. Lowenberg were appointed to revise the rules. This Committee was continued by the Convention of 1875, and instructed to publish their report prior to the Convention of 1876. In another column we give the proposed changes in the rules, and call the attention of our readers to the subject, so that when the Convention meets in August the subject may be understood and intelligently discussed.

HAYES' PROMISES.

In his letter of acceptance Gov. Hayes promises to reform the civil service and to run the entire government on reform principles if elected. This is mere idle talk. It is just as impossible for Hayes to reform the Republican party as it is for him to remove the mountains into the Sea. In these days of republican misrule the administration is run by the party leaders, not by the President, who is a mere figure head. In order to reform the civil or any other service he must reform his party and it is beyond his power to unseat the present leaders of the party and to make honest men out of the army of office holders who have been growing rich on the peoples money for the past twelve years. It would be strange indeed, if the people are not yet ready to admit that abuses and corruption have crept into the administration of public affairs, and that this, in connection with the ruinous financial policy of the party in power, is what has brought upon the nation its present condition of business prostration. While Hayes promises reform, the platform on which he was nominated, does not even admit that there is any thing to reform. Under the present party machinery it would be impossible for him to carry out the first letter of his promise. What then, must be done? Let the people of the nation arise in their majesty and might and proclaim that the day of retribution has come, that dishonest officials and imbecile Presidents will no longer be tolerated. Let them place Samuel J Tilden in the executive chair and clean out the hordes of corrupt men who are washing the public money and demoralizing the country and in a short time we shall find that a new era has dawned upon us, and the dear old stars and stripes will again wave, the proudest flag on the face of the globe.

TRUTH AT LAST.

The Gazette and Bulletin gives undivided support to Hayes as it did to Grant. In a late number it says:

"It transpires that the removal of Postmaster General Jewell was caused by his sympathy for Mr. Bristow and for his energy in enforcing reform. President Grant is determined, it would seem, to retain no one in office who was in any way interested in making war on the thieving rings that were formed to fatten off the government. In a word, the Babcocks, and all of that ilk, now feel sure of executive protection. Fortunately for the country, however, President Grant's term will end on the fourth of March next—seven months and a half from this time.—Gazette & Bulletin.

Now we desire to call its attention to the following:

The National Administration merits commendation for the honorable work in the management of domestic and foreign affairs, and President Grant deserves the hearty gratitude of the American people for his patriotism and his immense services in war and in peace.—Seventeenth Resolution of the Republican National Convention.

"The resolutions are in accord with my views."—Rutherford B. Hayes' Letter of Acceptance.

The platform endorses Grant, and Hayes endorses the Platform. What civil service reform can come from such a man? Nominated by Grant, through Cameron and Morton, the campaign to be organized and conducted by Zack Chandler, Grant's Secretary of the Interior—supported by the money and influence of 80,000 office-holders and all the corrupt rings,—the election of Hayes would simply be a perpetuation of the present administration, the only change being its nominal head.

Tilden's election means REFORM, and every defaulter and thief in the country knows it. Hence their opposition.

Grant has already begun to empty the penitentiaries in the interest of Hayes. Seven storekeepers and gaugers have been turned loose in Indiana within a few days. These fellows are among the small fry and their release is unimportant, save as it indicates a policy which will perhaps lead to the pardon of such notable offenders as McKee and Avery. A petition for Avery has been circulating for some time and has received a good many signatures, and it is now announced that a second paper appeal is before the Attorney General.

President Grant's household organ in Washington declares that Gov. Hayes' letter of acceptance is all that his most earnest friends could have desired. The organ at the same time earnestly favors the pardon of M' Donald and the rest of the imprisoned whiskey thieves. Dyer's removal is accepted as an indication of Grant's purpose to issue an early pardon.

Senator Booth declines to serve on the ticket with Peter Cooper and supports Tilden and Hendricks. All the rest of the labor reformers would do well to imitate his example.

Birds of a feather flock together; and says the N. Y. Sun:

"It's a suggestive fact that while Blaine was pushing through his railway jobs, he put Wheeler at the head of the Pacific railroad committee. He knew his man."

President Grant and Secretary Fish could not find time to attend the National Celebration at Philadelphia, but they can take three days at Deer Park in Maryland just for fun.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH GRANT?

Without any cause, provocation or explanation, so far as is known Grant, requested the resignation of Post Master General Jewell, which was immediately tendered. J. U. Tyner of Indiana has been appointed in his stead. The rapidity with which these cabinet changes, have been made of late, taken with the fact that the President was unable to be present at the Centennial celebration in Philadelphia on the 4th of July, the removal of District Attorney Dyer who conducted the Whiskey ring trials in the West, and caused the conviction of the prisoners, the resignation of Commissioner Pratt, the appointment of the corrupt Fisher as District Attorney in Delaware and many other acts of a similar character all point most conclusively to but one explanation of the Presidents conduct. We are forced to the conviction that Grant has been afflicted with one of his periodical attacks of illness caused by indulging in too much centennial rum. The cheeks of the American people mantle with the blush of shame in contemplating the situation. Oh virtue thy name is not U. S. Grant!

Important to Voters.

All persons to secure the right to vote in Pennsylvania, must be assessed two months before the election and have paid a State or county tax (either will do) within two years. In case the tax is paid this year, it must be a month preceding the election.

Foreign born citizens wishing to vote next November must take out their naturalization papers a month before election. They must also be assessed two months previous to the day of voting.

The election will be held on "the Tuesday next following the first Monday of November," being this year the 7th day of the month.

Monday, September 4th, is the last day for being assessed.

Thursday, October 5th, is the last day for securing naturalization papers.

Thursday, October 5th, is the last day on which taxes can be paid in legal time to vote.

These dates are very important, and should be carefully kept in mind by Democratic workers and Campaign Committees everywhere. It is better not to wait till the last day, but to have these essential requirements attended to at the earliest practical period.

TILDEN.

The Times, McClure's brilliant paper, in speaking of our nominee for President says:

Gover Tilden is alike blameless in his individual and public character. As an anti-slavery follower of Silas Wright, he braved power and discarded political success te maintain his convictions. As a political organizer and leader, no fraud has ever claimed him as its parent. As the methodical and fearless assailant of the defiant Tweed oligarchy of political prosecution and, plunder, be stands single from the mass of his fellows of all parties as the man who regarded right as paramount to political success, and as Governor of the first State of the Union, he has exercised his great authority with unfaltering devotion to the regeneration of power rather than to present party triumphs. Whatever may be the popular judgment as to the wisdom of a restoration of the Democracy to national power, the man Samuel J. Tilden will be personally honored by the great mass of his countrymen.

THE TARIFF.

Some of the opposition journals are accusing the Democrats of being a free trade party. Sensible men know that this is not now, nor has it ever been a mere party question. Opinions upon the tariff question are guided by the feelings of the people in various localities, hence in the West free trade sentiments are felt by parties, and in the East and Pennsylvania a strong feeling prevails in favor of a protective tariff.

But we assert that Hayes and the people of Ohio are free trade in sentiment, and that neither the Republican platform, nor the letter of acceptance, say one encouraging word to the protective tariff men. Our opponents should be sure of their ground before opening this question.

Petroff, the man who carried about a list of fourteen of his associates in the Legislature, whom he offered for sale on the Boom bill, for which he was expelled from the House, has been re-nominated for Member by his republican constituents in Philadelphia. The ways of the great Reform Republican party are peculiar.

Senator Lot M. Morrill has taken charge of the Treasury Department. He delayed acceptance until Grant had carefully weeded out all the men who had aided Bristow in punishing the thieves and scoundrels who had robbed the Government. Now, there will be peace, because Cameron will not prove troublesome.

Two better men than Tilden for President and Hendricks for Vice President, we have never known, and we have known a great many.—Forney's Press.

Colorado was admitted just in time to make our thirty-eighth State for the Centennial. She is welcome to the sisterhood, even if we have to alter our flags a little.

Answer to Correspondents.

In answer to "Alphabetical," in your last issue, for a remedy for consumption in its first stages, I can recommend Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," if taken according to directions, for it has been thoroughly tried in my family, and the results were glorious. "Alphabetical" must not expect one bottle to do the work—my wife took three bottles before she could discover any change, but after the third bottle every dose seemed to strengthen the lungs, and now she is well and hearty. If "Alphabetical" will write to me I will get witnesses to the above.

AN HISTORICAL FACT.—Every agent who has been steadily selling the Improved $20 Home stead Sewing Machine for three years, owns his dwelling house, has a good account in bank, is clear of debt, and has money at interest,—the natural consequence of securing a good agency for superior goods at the lowest prices. A good first-class Sewing Machine, most useful—reliable at all times, easy to understand and control, the same size and does the same work as any machines that sell at four times the price. There is no machine at any price better, or that will do finer or more work, and certainly none so low in price by many dollars. The Homestead is widely known and used in thousands of families in the Eastern and Middle States, and daily becoming popular in the West. It will save its cost several times over in one season, doing the work of the family, or will earn four or five dollars a day for any man or woman who sews for a living. It is the strongest machine made, is ready at all times to do its work, makes the strongest and finest stitch yet invented, and is fully acknowledged as the Standard Family Sewing Machine. Price, complete for domestic use, $20, delivered at your door, no matter how remote you may reside. Business permanent and honorable, with more certain and rapid sales, and larger profits than any other. Extraordinary liberal offers made to local or traveling agents where we have none established; or, if there is no agent near you, send your order direct to the factory. Address John H. REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RULES.

The Committee appointed by the President of the last annual county Convention to examine and if thought proper to revise the Rules of nomination of the Democratic party of Columbia, have examined the said rules and now, in pursuance of the Resolution authorizing their appointment, make the following report:

That in their opinion several amendments of the rules can be made with advantage to the general scheme of order and regulation which the rules were enacted to establish.

It is believed that the classification and arrangement of the Rules according to natural or convenient divisions of subject matter will render them more convenient for use and to some extent more easily understood.

The Rules do not provide for cases of tie votes, in electing delegates or upon instructions nor fully define the powers and duties of the Standing Committee. And it is believed that several of the rules may be more clearly expressed and some of them be shortened and condensed.

The whole are now presented by us in a revised form with some matter added and with some omissions of unnecessary clauses, but most of them are left substantially unchanged.

A code of good laws or rules must be a matter of growth and of time, the result of experience and trial—we are fully convinced that our rules in general will compare favorably with those of other counties of the State and that they are much better calculated to secure those capital objects—purity and fairness in nominations. We have fortunately avoided the heavy expenses and certain corruption of the Crawford county system which has elsewhere worked so badly upon trial and been abandoned in Northumberland and other counties, while several defeats of our old Convention system have been corrected. Districts are more fairly represented than they were formerly, delegate elections more fairly conducted and Conventions of larger numbers less liable to excitement and to imputations of unfair or improper conduct.

Prudent amendments occasionally made to the rules of nomination will no doubt be advantageous in promoting good feeling and securing fair play in party action, but extreme or very extensive changes of the Rules do not seem to be now required.

XVII. No person shall be eligible to a nomination by a Convention who has opposed the Democratic ticket at the next preceding election; but this rule shall apply only to cases of opposition to tickets hereafter formed.

XX. If any delegate shall receive any money or other valuable thing, or accept the promise of money or other valuable thing, or any pecuniary advantage to be paid, delivered or secured in future, either to himself or to any other person for him, from any candidate or other person for such candidate, as an inducement for his vote, or under any other pretext upon proof of the fact to the satisfaction of a majority of the Convention, such delegate shall be forthwith expelled and shall not be received as a delegate to any future Convention for a period of two years, and during that time shall also be ineligible for any party nomination. Cases arising under this and the next preceding rule shall have precedence over all other business in Convention until determined.

XXI. None of these rules shall be altered or rescinded at a regular annual convention, unless by a vote of two-thirds of all the delegates present.

XXII. Candidates for nomination may be voted for directly, at the delegate elections, and shall receive delegate or district votes in Convention in proportion to their popular vote in the several districts, upon the same principle on which delegates are elected under the 5th rule.

XXIII. No delegate to any convention hereafter shall be entitled to a seat unless his credentials show that he is instructed for some candidate for the various offices to be filled, as set out in the call for the Convention.

A Health Promoting Stimulant.

Physicians, who certainly ought to be the best judges of such matters, declare that wholesome stimulant is not only desireable but essential in many instances. When the temporary good effect of a sound stimulant is confirmed and rendered permanent, as in the case of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, by the action of tonic and alterative principles combined with it, it becomes infinitely more efficacious as a renovant of physical energy and a corrective of those conditions of the body which invite disease. The Bitters have received the emphatic sanction of medical men who have observed the effect of that popular stimulative cordial as a remedy for weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, inactivity of the liver, malarious fevers, and many other diseases. Its basis is sound old rye, the purest liquor known to commerce, and itself possessing tonic properties of no mean order. July 1mo

As Uninterrupted Temperature.

Dr. J. S. Redfield, who was married to Marie Barkley, a sister of C. G. Barkley, Esq., and formerly a resident of Danville, died suddenly at Fort Scott, Kansas, on Thursday, June 22d. Dr. Redfield was the surgeon of the 6th Kansas Regiment, and participated in nearly all the battles in the Southwest. The Fort Scott "Monitor" of the 29th ult., says :

"At the close of the war, Dr. Redfield resumed the practice of medicine and surgery in this city, and until his death had been constantly engaged in his professional duties. The deceased was a prominent, highly esteemed citizen, and one of the most successful physicians and surgeons in the state. No one was more liberal, generous and enterprising, no one had a larger circle of warm friends, no one was more worthy of esteem than Dr. Redfield. The community deeply sympathizes with the bereaved family."—Republican.

On the Fourth of July in passing the residence of C. B. Brockway, we noticed an old torn flag bearing the inscription "Brockway's Battery." Never having heard of such a battery we carefully examined Bates' history, but could find no trace of it there. Just then it occurred that possibly this was the name of the battery belonging to the Fishingcreek confederacy.—Republican.

The writer of the above did not make a very extended search in Bates', or he would have found a very lengthy and favorable notice of the Battery we once had the honor to command. It was a pardonable egotism to identify the old flag. The editors of the Republican distinguished themselves during the war by staying at home, and abusing those who were risking their lives in the Union cause, and they are not presumed to know the fact that armies, corps, divisions &c., were generally known by the names of their commanders. The slur about the "Fishingcreek Confederacy" is too weak an attempt at wit to require an answer. We can only remark here, that if there had been such a confederacy, and had "Brockway's Battery" been in it somebody would have got hurt, but it would not have been the editors of the Republican. Natural instinct would have kept them miles from gunpowder.

The following appointment of teachers for the ensuing year have been made by the Bloom School Board.

THE BATTLE OF THE ELEMENTS.

HEAVY RAIN AND MUCH DAMAGE.

On Tuesday evening last a little before six o'clock, the heavens began to darken and the lightning darted its fiery tongues in every direction. After a mighty rush of wind the rain began to fall, and in a short time the gutters and streams were swelled to rivulets. The stream that runs diagonally across the town from Herring's tannery, flowed in torrents. Starting at the tannery it washed away a bridge, throwing it up against a large tank of water, and when it reached Third street, below Iron. it did much damage. The rear of the house occupied by J. Welliver was washed away, the water flooding the first floor of the house. The first floor of the house occupied by J. Christman was also flooded, leaving about three feet of water on it after the rain. Mr. Verry's house was drowned out, the cellar filled, and other damage done. Gardens were destroyed by a deposit of mud, chickens were drowned, and the side-walks washed into the middle of the street. On Main street the lightning struck the bakery of W. M. Mason, and completely demolished the oven. One man informed us that the water was so deep on his barn floor that he was obliged to put his horse in a wagon to keep it from being washed away. We hear of much damage being done in different parts of the county, but not in sufficient details to enable us to publish it this week. It was the severest storm known in this section for many years.

At a meeting of the Philologian Society held in their hall at the Normal School on Friday morning last at eleven o'clock the following resolutions on the death of William H. Ford, were adopted.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst by the hand of death, our beloved brother and respected friend, William W. Ford, it is: Resolved, that in this dispensation of Divine Providence we recognize the hand of an all wise Ruler, and that we bow in submission to the will of Him whose "ways are past finding out."

Resolved, That in the death of William H. Ford, the Philologian Society has sustained an irreparable loss, and that we hereby express our full appreciation of this heavy affliction, and our admiration of his Christian life, and noble character.

Resolved, That we extend to the family of the deceased, our deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

Resolved, That with the permission of the family, the members of the Philologian Society take charge of the funeral services, and that the Philologian Hall be properly draped for thirty days in respect to the memory of the deceased.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and also be published in the Normal Mentor and Bloomsburg papers.

Mr. Ford had been connected with the school almost from its foundation, and at the time of his death was steward and Superintendent of the Grounds. He was always faithful in the discharge of his duties, and the school, as well as the community have sustained a severe loss in his sad death. His place will not be easily filled. A very long procession, consisting of members of the Philologian Society. Faculty Board of Trustees, School, Sunday school class, and citizens, followed the remains from the Normal School to the Lutheran Church where the funeral services were conducted on Sunday morning. A large number were unable to obtain admission. An excellent discourse appropriate to the occasion was delivered by Rev. Dr. McCron. After the service the remains were taken to Catawissa, the home of the deceased parents, for burial.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

The closing ceremonies of the term began on Monday afternoon July 17th. At that time the Seniors had their class exercises on the campus. Instead of planting a tree as is the usual custom they erected a monument in the shape of a marble bell representing the old State House bell, a very pretty and appropriate emblem of the Centennial class. The exercises consisted of roll call and sentiments, song by the Junior class, an oration, History of the class, Prophecies, Class Statistics, Poem, Class Song, Deposits in stone, and breaking a wreath, all of which were well performed.

On Tuesday morning at half past nine the Commencement exercises began. The stage in the Hall was occupied by the Board of Trustees, the Faculty, clergymen of the town, members of the Press and others. A large audience witnessed the proceedings. The following was the programme.

Prayer,—Rev. S. Mitchell.
Music,—Glee Class.
Salutatory,—Annie M. Milsom.
Oration,—E. O Kreider.
Essay,—M. J. Hunt.
Essay,—E. F. Dickens.
Oration,—Richard R. Breisch.
Essay,—M. E. Schlicher.
Music,—Quartette.
Essay,—Ida J. Patton.
Oration,—Justus Sutliff.
Essay,—Sue F. Miller,
Oration,—A. Frank Geiser.
Essay,—M. M. Stevenson.
Oration,—Myron I. Low.
Essay.—Lizzie R. Harman.
Music,—Ada Brower, Maude Freeze.
Essay,—Retty J. Creasy.
Oration,—Charles C. Evans.
Essay,—Ella A. Kline.
Oration,—Charles B Young.
Essay,—Lauretta S. Bayrd.
Oration I. E. Baust.
Music,—Glee Class.
Essay,—Amanda Breech.
Oraton,—Alexander Lillie.
Essay,—Sadie Kester.
Oration,—William S. Smith.
Essay,—Sarah E. Smith.
Valedictory,—Judson P. Welsh.
Presentation,—Farewell to '76—Junior Class.
Conferring Diplomas.
Class Song.—Senior Class.
Benediction,—Rev. Dr. McCron.

Owing to the length of time which it was evident would be taken if the whole programme was carried out, it became necessary that some portion must be omitted, and therefore several of the orations and essays were left out. All of the exercises were entertaining, and very creditable to all concerned. Each speaker received a bouquet on retiring from the stage. We must not fail to notice the neat and becoming dresses in which the young ladies appeared. Instead of procuring extravagant and elegant suits thereby incuring great expense, and loss of time in making and worrying over what they were to wear, they wore pretty, light calico dresses, made by themselves. This is a very praiseworthy reform movement, and we hope it will be continued by future classes. The music prepared for the occasion under the direction of Miss Watson was unusually good. The degree of Master of Elementary Didactics was confined on five members of the class of 1873.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

At the close of the exercises a business meeting of the Alumni Association was held in Philologian Hall. W. J. Buckalew President, in the chair. The members of the graduating class signed the constitution and were admitted to the Association. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected. President Geo. E. Elwell, Recording Secretary Miss Agnes Buckingham, Secretary Geo A. Clark. Executive committee, H. C. Bittenbender, C. Welliver, A. M. Milsom, Robert Buckingham, A. Brungart, Orator, Leoni Mellick, Essayist Miss N.Cooley. A very interesting essay was read by Miss. Sadie Speer of Orangeville, class of 1871. At two o,clock the Association proceeded to the Exchange Hotel, where an elegant collation, gotten up by Mr. F. D. Koons, superintendent of the hotel, awaited them. Notice was given Mr. Koons the evening before to prepare the dinner, and the very satisfactory manner in which he performed his duties on such short notice entitles him to much credit. After the good things on the table had been disposed of, the usual toasts were proposed by the chairman Geo. E. Elwell and responses made by Dr. Griswold Principal of the School, Judge Elwell, President of the Board of Trustees, Prof. J. W. Ferree of the Faculty, J. I. Ailman, class of 1871. Geo. W. Mears, class of 1874, Rev. Dr. McCron, and E. O. Kricker, class of 1876, after which the Association adjourned. A pleasant reception was held in the parlors of the school in the evening. The class of 1876 is the largest ever graduated in our Normal School, and they may be justly proud of their achievements. The school was never more prosperous than at present, and a bright future is before it.

EDITORS COLUMBIAN—Gentlemen: In last week's issue of the Republican I noticed an inquiry as to the whereabouts of Brockway's Battery. I am convinced that when the editor of the Republican referred to "Bates' History," he did not take the best authority. During my travels through the southern part of Pennsylvania and Maryland, lately, I stopped at Gettysburg to view the National Cemetery and battle ground. The Superintendent of the hotel, learning that I came from Bloomsburg, stated the points most interesting to me, would be where the "Boys" from Bloomsburg were stationed during the fight—directing meat the same time to the place marked as Capt. Brockway's Battery. The Battery was planted on the opposite side of the Turnpike from the gate of the National Cemetery.

The cannon are on the field and can be seen as designated by hand boards.

Yours, &c., N.

A CARD.

It is proper that I should explain to my friends that business engagements will prevent me from making a canvass of the County to solicit votes as a candidate for Congress. My devotion and services to the party are known; and I believe the people, unaided, are fully competent to judge of the qualifications of a candidate for that important office without personal solicitation.

C. B. BROCKWAY.

THE KEY NOTE.—Judge Elwell, at the recent dinner of the Alumni of our Normal School, took occasion to commend in strong terms the ladies of the graduating class for having attended the examinations and graduation in neat, calico dresses, which they had made themselves.—It was a precedent that should be generally followed. Rivalry in dress is not only harsh upon the poorer pupils, but necessarily distracts the mind of a female pupil from her lessons and examinations.

Notwithstanding the lack of proper notice a large and intelligent audience met at the Normal School Hall on last Monday evening to listen to a lecture by Col. C. G. Jackson of Berwick on the subject of "How we use the King's English." The lecturer was easy and graceful in style, and handled his subject with uncommon ability. His quotations were accurate, and the illustrations to the point. Upon the whole the address was a fine literary treat, and we hope the gifted author will visit us again.

The wrong pig squeals, this week. For the information of a certain gentleman who amuses himself by writing nonsense for a small sheet, and making fun of the proprietor for publishing it, we would say that we never aim at all at microscopic objects.

On Wednesday of last week the residence of Watson Eves, in Greenwood Twp., was burned We are not informed as to the cause. It was insured for $750.

Jacob S. a son of Mr. Wintersteen of this place, was instantly killed by lightning in Ashland, Nebraska, on the 4th inst. Mr. Wintersteen was a sober industrious young man in his 26th year and but two months ago left here for that place in search for an older brother from whom they had had no word for more than a year. Not finding his brother he had commenced work on a farm, and when struck by lightning was attending with his friends a Fourth of July celebration at the place mentioned.

Miscellaneous.

Jeanne Darc.

It is more than four hundred and fifty years, since, in the village of Domremy on the river Meuse, was born a little girl to whom they gave the name Jeanne (in English, Joan or Jane). It is possible that her father, a poor and respectable peasant was named Darc. Later, when the little girl had grown famous, people altered the name and called her Jeanne d' Arc (of Arc), which is as though one of you should be called Kate of Rochester, or Lucy of Minneapolis. France was not then the rich and powerful country which it has since become. For a long time it had been governed or misgoverned by a king who was insane, and first one party and then another, getting tired of his rule, had thrown it off, so that the nation was in a state of civil war.

It was in the midst of these unhappy times that Jeanne was born, and grew to be, first a hardy little girl, an! then a vigorous maiden, with a noble, beautiful face, though its expression was thoughtful and sad. She had a rough, hard life, working in the fields and caring for the farm animals; and when feeding the oxen or tending the sheep in the dim twilight, she had plenty of time to think of the miseries amid which she lived. The peasants in that country used to repeat an old prophecy that France, in her time of deepest distress, would be saved by a maiden. Nobody knew who made the prophecy, but every one believed it, for those were superstitious days, and people put great faith in legends and olds saying. There were no books and newspapers, as there are now, to make persons wide-awake and intelligent. Jeanne believed with the rest. And when she felt sad and hopeless at the sufferings she heard about, she thought a great deal about this prophecy, and wondered when the wonderful maiden would come to aid them.

She dwelt so much upon these things that at last it seemed to her that a voice spoke, whether from within or without she could not be sure, and said that she was the maiden appointed to save the land from its troubles. Just then the crazy King died, and his son, Charles VII., a young man of twenty, succeeded to the throne. It was a miserable inheritance truly, for few acknowledged his authority, and he was too poor to pay for soldiers, who in those days were always to be had for pay. He and his little army which he contrived to get together, fought two or three times with the English and were beaten, and at last the only important city left him, the city of Orleans, was closely besieged by the enemy. For months it held out, but little by little the foe gained, till it became evident that before long Orleans would be forced to yield, and with it would go the last hope of the royal family of France.

Jeanne Darc was eighteen years old at this time, and the "voices" which had been speaking to her for five years were growing each day louder and calling her to do something, she knew not what, to save the country. At last she became so certain of her divine mission that she could keep silent no longer, and she persuaded her uncle to take her to Baudricourt, one of the king's officers, who was governor of the town of Vancouleur. To him she explained about the voices, and asked him to send her to the king, promising that if he would do so she would raise the siege of Orleans, and that the king, in less than three months, should be crowned in the city of Rheims, which was at that time fast held by the English. The governor did not believe in her a bit at first, but matters had got so desperate that he was willing to try anything, so at last he sent Jeanne to Chinon, where the king was residing.

It must have been a singular sight, Jeanne in her simple peasant's garb in the midst of the gay court. But she was too much in earnest to think about herself or be frightened. The king stood among the other gentlemen, dressed exactly like them, but Jeanne went straight up and knelt before him without a moment's hesitation, which surprised everybody very much.

So eloquent was she, so full of enthusiasm and confidence in her own powers, that the king and his counselors believed in her at once. They gave her a suit of armor and a horse, which she knew very well how to manage, for she had often ridden the horses to water in Domremy. When they fetched the sword which belonged to the armor, she rejected it, and begged them to send to the Church of St. Catharine of Fierbois, where, buried in the ground, would be found a consecrated sword which it was meant she should carry. They did so, and, sure enough, the sword was discovered just as she had said, which made people believe in her more than ever. Thus equipped, with a white banner in her hand, she took command of ten thousands troops headed by the brave Dunois, and marched straight to Orleans. The news of this wonderful event spread everywhere. The English, who were as superstitious as the French, took fright. Whole regiments deserted "for fear of the Mayde," for their is nothing like superstition to make cowards even of brave men. Jeanne's own soldiers, fired by her noble courage, fought as it inspired. In less than a week the siege of Orleans was raised, and the enemy was in full retreat. Other battles followed, in all of which Jeanne was victorious. Rheims was given up without a blow and there, in three months from the time of Jeanne's first appearance at the courts, Charles was solemnly crowned king,—the "Maid of Orleans," as she was now called, standing beside him in full armor, with her white banner in her hand! She had kept her promise, and the work was done.—From "The Little Maid of Domremy," by Susan Coolidge. St. Nicholas for June.

RESTLESSNESS IN CHILDREN.—If you watch the management of a child by a mother of small capacity, says Herbert Spencer, you may be struck by the inability she betrays to imagine the child's thoughts and feelings. Full of energy, which he must expend in some way, and eager to see everything, her little boy is every moment provoking her by his restlessness. 'Sit still! 'Get down I tell you?' 'Why can't you be quiet?' are the commands and expostulations she utters to repress these childish activities mainly out of regard for what she thinks propriety, and does it without any adequate recognition of the penalties she inflicts. Though she herself lived through this phase of extreme curiosity—this early time when almost every object passed has the charm of novelty, and when the overflowing energies generate a painful irritation if pent up; yet now she cannot believe how keen is the desire for seeing which she balks, and how difficult is the maintenance of that quietude on which she insists.

Gov. Hartranft, having been applied to by Mayor Hammond, of Erie, for old cannon with which to ornament the grave of Gen. Anthony Wayne, replies that he does not know of any available for that purpose.

'My poem is rather lengthy,' he said, 'and may be you won't have room for it this week.' The editor yawned and replied, 'Oh, yes, we could find room for it if it was twelve times as long—our stove is a large one, you see.'

VEGETINE

Strikes at the root of disease by purifying the blood, restoring the liver and kidneys to healthy action, invigorating the nervous system.

Vegetine

Is not a vile, nauseous compound, which simply purges the bowels, but a safe pleasant remedy which is sure to purify the blood and thereby restore the health.

Vegetine

Is now prescribed in cases of Scrofula and other diseases of the blood, by many of the best physicians, owing to its great success in curing all diseases of this nature.

Vegetine

does not deceive invalids into false hopes by purging and creating a factitious appetite, but assists nature in cleaning and purifying the whole system, leading the patient gradually to perfect health.

Vegetine

Was looked upon as an experiment for some time by some of our best physicians, but those most incredulous in regard to its merit are now its most ardent friends and supporters.

Vegetine

Instead of being a puffed-up medicine has worked its way up to its present astonishing success by actual merit in curing all diseases of the blood, of whatever nature.

Vegetine

says a Boston physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Fearing of its many wonderful cures, after all other remedies had failed, I visited the laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is procured from barks, roots and herbs, each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."

Vegetine

Is acknowledged and recommended by physicians and apothecaries to be the best purifier and cleanser of the blood yet discovered and thousands speak in its praise who have been restored to health.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—About one year since I found myself in a feeble condition from general debility. VEGETINE was strongly recommended to me by a friend who had been much benefitted by its use. I procured the article and after using several bottles was restored to health and discontinued its use. I feel quite confident that there is no medicine superior to it for those complaints for which it is especially prepared, and would cheerfully recommend it to those who feel that they need something to restore them to perfect health. Respectfully yours,

U. L. PETTINGILL,
Firm of S. M. Pettingill & Co., 10 State St., Boston.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear sir—Two bottles of VEGETINE furnished me by your agent my wife has used with great benefit. For a long time she has been troubled with dizziness and costiveness; these troubles are now entirely removed by the use of Vegetine. She was also troubled with Dyspepsia and General Debility; and has been greatly benefitted.

Dear Sir—This is to certify that I have sold at retail 1848 dozen (1892 bottles) of your VEGETINE since April 12, 1870, and can truly say that it has given the best satisfaction of any remedy for the complaints for which it is recommended, that I ever sold. Scarcely a day passes without some of my customers testifying to its merits on themselves or their friends. I am perfectly cognizant of several cases of Scrofulous Tumors being cured by VEGETINE alone in this vicinity. Very respectfully yours,

TO THE AFFLICTED AND UNFORTUNATE.—There is no class of diseases that require more experience to treat successfully than those of a private character. Many physicians suppose that when the primary symptoms are removed, the disorder or poison has been overcome. Such is not the case. The difficulties, or the various stages of the disease are then to succeed. The parts first attacked are the throat, nose, mouth, tongue, skin, tendions, bones, ligaments, ears, eyes, &c. Frequently these symptoms are treated by physicians as simple ulcerations, until some of the important organs of the body become inverted, when death relieves the sufferer. DR. H. W. LOBB, having made all private diseases a study, guarantees a speedy and permanent cure with purely vegetable medicines. Medical offices and drug store, No. 337 North Fifteenth street. IMPORTANT TO ALL.

DR. SWAYNE,

The discoverer and compounder of the far-famed

Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

and other valuable preparations, entered upon his professional career with the important advantage of a regular medical education in one of the oldest and best schools in Philadelphia, and, perhaps, in the world. He subsequently served a faithful term of practice in the Philadelphia Dispensary, and for many years attended to the Hospital. In these institutions he enjoyed the most ample opportunities of obtaining an insight into diseases in all their various forms, as well as for ascertaining the best methods of their treatment. In offering, therefore, to the people of the United States the fruits of his extensive professional experience in the medical compounds as the best results of his skill and observation, he feels that he is but proffering a boon to every family throughout the land, feeling, as he does, confidently in the merits and efficacious virtue of the remedies he herewith commends. The vast amount of testimony from all parts of the world has proven "DOCTOR SWAYNE'S COMPOUND SYRUP OF WILD CHERRY" the most efficacious remedy known, and it is admitted by our most eminent physicians, and all who have witnessed its wonderful healing properties. The WILD CHERRY in all ages of the world and in all countries where it is known it has been justly celebrated for its wonderful medicinal qualities, but its great power to cure some of the worst and most distressing diseases among us was never fully ascertained until the experiments of that skilful physician, Dr. Swayne, had demonstrated its high adaptation, in combination with Pine Tree Tar, and other equally valuable vegetable ingredients, which chemically combined produce it action more certain and beneficial in curing all diseases of the throat, breast and lungs. DR. SWAYNE'S WILD CHERRY COMPOUND strikes at the root of disease by purifying the blood, restoring the liver and kidneys to healthy action, invigorating the nervous and shattered constitution. If your druggist or storekeeper does not have it, do not be put off by any other remedy that may be offered, but send to us direct, and we will forward a half dozen to any address, freight paid, on receipt of the price, $9 per dozen, or $1 the half dozen. Address letters to DR. SWAYNE & SON, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia. No charge will be made for advice.

Ask Your Druggist for Them.

Females and all who value health should never be without DR. SWAYNE'S TAR AND SARSAPARILLA PILLS, as they purify the blood, remove all obstructions, cleanse the skin of all pimples and blotches, and bring the rich color of health to the pale cheek. Female irregularities are restored to a healthy condition. They are a certain cure for Sick and Nervous Headache. As a Dinner Pill, nothing can exceed them: take one, two, or three, as may be found necessary; unlike others, they neither gripe, produce nausea, or any other unpleasant sensation, while they are as powerful as it is possible for a medicine to be and be harmless. These Pills cleanse out the disordered humors, enrich and purify the blood, remove all unhealthy lotions secretions of the stomach and bowels, causing a perfectly healthy state of the liver, and are undoubtedly the best cathartic and antibilious medicine yet discovered, and we are determined that the sick shall have them at a price within the means of the poorest (25 cents a box or 30 Pills.) If your druggist or storekeeper has not got them, do not be put off by any others that may be offered in their place, but send to us direct, and we will forward by mail, on receipt of the price, 25 cents a box or five boxes $1.

Itching Piles

Is generally preceded by a moisture, like perspiration, distressing itching, as though pin worms were crawling in or about the rectum, particularly at night when undressing or in bed after getting warm. It appears in summer as well as winter, oftentimes shows itself around the private parts, and is not confined to males only, but is quite as frequent that females are sorely afflicted, particularly in times of pregnancy, extending into the vagina, proving distressing almost beyond the powers of endurance. Cases of long standing, pronounced incurable, have been permanently cured by simply applying
